Preface

On 1 October 2002, the Austrian Code of Corporate Governance was presented to the public for the first time. This Code of Corporate Governance gave listed companies a set of voluntarily rules to help them establish good corporate governance and control systems. For more than two decades now, Austrian laws on stock markets and capital markets have been supplemented by a self-regulatory standard based on the principle of comply or explain. The Austrian Code of Corporate Governance has initiated a lot of positive changes and has helped strengthen the confidence of international and national investors in our market. It serves as a benchmark in the Austrian capital market for good governance and controls, and has become an essential component of the Austrian system of corporate governance.

One key feature of the Austrian Code of Corporate Governance is that it can be swiftly adapted to new national and international developments. It is standard good practice within the Working Group for Corporate Governance in Austria to ensure transparency by including all involved interest groups in the reviews of the Code. Our special thanks go to the capital market participants and institutions who have actively taken part in the discussion process by sending statements. Likewise, I would also like to thank the members of the Austrian Working Group for Corporate Governance for the great enthusiasm shown in their work on the further development of the Austrian corporate governance system.

Special thanks go to Dr. Wolfgang Nolz, who led the working group for more than a decade and has now handed over the baton to Alfred Lejsek, Head of the Financial Markets Group at the Federal Ministry of Finance until May 2024.

The focus of the 2025 Code revision is on sustainable corporate governance, taking ESG criteria into account. In addition, transparency via the company's website is becoming even more important. The general objective of promoting good corporate governance and transparency in order to increase investor confidence in listed companies will of course remain the focus of the ÖCGK.

I. Preamble

The Austrian Code of Corporate Governance provides Austrian corporations with a framework for the management and control of enterprises. It covers the standards of good corporate management common in international business practice as well as the most important provisions of Austrian corporation law that are of relevance in this context. A general overview of Austrian corporation law is given in the Annex 4.

The Code aims to establish a system of management and control of companies and groups that is accountable and is geared to creating sustainable, long-term value. Ecological and social sustainability is the basis for long-term value creation. Economic strength and stability are also prerequisites for investing in sustainability. Ecological and social sustainability, economic strength and stability are therefore mutually dependent and should be pursued simultaneously. This objective best serves the needs of all parties whose well-being depends on the success of the enterprise.

The Code is designed to increase transparency for all stakeholders.

This Code is addressed primarily to Austrian exchange-listed companies including exchange-listed European companies (Societas Europaea) registered in Austria. In the case of European companies registered in Austria that have a one-tier system (administrative board), the C- and R-Rules of the Code relating to the management board shall apply accordingly to the managing directors; the C- and R-Rules regarding the supervisory board shall apply accordingly to the administrative board.

It is also recommended that companies not listed on stock exchanges follow this Code to the extent that the rules are applicable.

The Code is based on the provisions of Austrian corporation law, securities law and capital markets law, the EU recommendations on the tasks of supervisory board members and on the remuneration of directors as well as on the principles set out in the OECD Principles of Corporate Governance.

Companies voluntarily undertake to adhere to the principles set out in the Austrian Code of Corporate Governance.

All Austrian listed companies are therefore called upon to make a public declaration of their commitment to the Code. A declaration of commitment to the Austrian Code of Corporate Governance is mandatory for Austrian companies that want to be admitted to the Prime Market of the Vienna Stock Exchange.

Companies that are subject to the company law of another EU member state or EEA member state and are listed on the Vienna Stock Exchange are called on to commit themselves to adhere to a corporate governance code recognized in this economic area and to publish this commitment including a reference to the code complied with on their websites (link). Companies that are subject to the company law of a country that is not a member of the EU or EEA and are listed on the Vienna Stock Exchange are called on to commit themselves to comply with the Austrian Code of Corporate Governance. The non-mandatory L rules of the Code are interpreted in this case as C rules.

In the interest of the greatest degree of transparency, all foreign companies listed on the Vienna Stock Exchange are called on to publish on their websites the provisions of company law that applies to them, at least with respect to the rules mentioned in Annex 3, and to maintain this information up to date.

Generally, the Code will be reviewed once a year taking relevant national and international developments into consideration, and will be adapted if required. The focus of the 2025 revision of the Code is on sustainable corporate governance, taking ESG criteria into account and strengthening transparency. The C-Rules and R-Rules of the Code in the January 2025 version apply to financial years beginning after December 31, 2024.

Companies have a responsibility toward society. Therefore, it is also recommended that appropriate voluntary measures and initiatives be taken such as to reconcile work and family life.

Notes to the Code

In addition to the most important statutory requirements under Austrian law, the Code also contains rules which are considered common international practice. Non-compliance with these rules must be explained and the reasons stated. The Code also contains rules that go beyond these requirements and should be applied on a voluntary basis.

The Code defines the following categories of rules:

1. Legal requirement (L): This rule refers to mandatory legal requirements¹.
2. Comply or explain (C): This rule is to be followed; any deviation must be explained and the reasons stated in order to be in compliance with the Code. Guidelines for the explanations and the statement of reasons for deviations are contained in Annex 2b.
3. Recommendation (R): The nature of this rule is a recommendation; non-compliance with this rule requires neither disclosure nor explanation.

For rules that apply not only to the listed company itself, but also to its associated group companies, the term “enterprise” is used instead of “company”. The special rules applicable to banks and insurance companies shall not be affected by the Code. The rules of the Code do not require the disclosure of any company or business secrets.

¹ Certain legal provisions apply only to companies listed on the stock exchange in Austria. These rules are to be interpreted as a C rule for companies not listed on the stock exchange. The wording of the L-Rules does not necessarily match the exact wording of the respective laws, but has been adapted to match the terminology of the Code. It is not the intention of the authors to change the interpretation of statutory provisions.

II. Shareholders and the General Meeting

R 7. The company supports its shareholders, in particular persons with impairments or disabilities, in participating in general meetings and in exercising their rights in the best possible way. This is to be considered when planning the venue and time of the general meeting, when defining the requirements of participation and the exercising of voting rights, and with respect to the right to be heard and receive information.²

- 8. The general meeting has the right to authorise the management board for a period not exceeding thirty months to buy back the company's own shares up to a maximum of 10% of the share capital in those cases permitted by law. The resolution and authorization for the buyback are to be published immediately before execution. The resolution and, immediately before implementation, the execution of this buyback authorization shall be disclosed.

Qualifications of Members, Composition, and Independence of the Supervisory Board

52. When electing the members of the supervisory board, the general shareholders' meeting shall take due care to check the expertise and personal qualifications of the supervisory board members and to ensure a balanced composition with respect to the structure and the business of the company. Furthermore, reasonable attention is to be given to the aspect of diversity of the supervisory board with respect to the representation of both genders and the age structure, and in the case of exchange-listed companies, also with a view to the internationality of the members.

The supervisory board shall be made up of at least 30 percent women and at least 30 percent men, provided the supervisory board consists of at least six members (shareholder representatives), and the staff representatives must consist of at least 20 percent female and male employees each.

Care must also be taken to ensure that no member is elected to the supervisory board who has been convicted by law for a criminal act that would compromise his or her professional reliability as a supervisory board member.

52a. The number of members on the supervisory board (without employees' representatives) shall be ten at most. New members of a supervisory board must inform themselves adequately of the organization and activities of the company as well as of the tasks and responsibilities of the supervisory board members.

- 53. The majority of the members of the supervisory board elected by the general meeting or delegated by shareholders in accordance with the articles of incorporation shall be independent of the company and its management board. A member of the supervisory board shall be deemed independent if said member does not have any business or personal relations to the company or its management board that constitute a material conflict of interests and therefore suited to influence the behaviour of the member. The supervisory board shall define on the basis of this general clause the criteria that constitute independence and shall publish them in the Corporate Governance Report. The guidelines in Annex 1 shall serve as further orientation. According to the criteria defined, it shall be the responsibility of every member of the supervisory board to declare its independence vis-à-vis the supervisory board. The Corporate Governance Report shall clearly explain which members are deemed independent according to this assessment.

The Corporate Governance Report must indicate which members of the supervisory board meet these criteria.

the management board of said company in the last two years, unless the appointment is the result of a proposal by shareholders that hold more than 25 percent of voting rights in the company. However, no more than one person is permitted to be a member of the supervisory board for whom the two-year period has not yet expired. A member of the supervisory board of an exchange-listed company who has been a member of the management board of said company in the past two years cannot be appointed as chairperson of the supervisory board.

56. Members of the supervisory board shall not have more than eight mandates (function of chairperson shall count double) as supervisory board members for listed companies.

If a member of a supervisory board fails to personally attend more than half of the meetings of the supervisory board, this fact shall be stated in the Corporate Governance Report.

Co-determination

- L 59. The co-determination rights of employees' representatives on the supervisory board form part of the statutory Austrian system of corporate governance in addition to the co-determination rights at the operational level in the form of works councils. The employees' representatives are entitled to appoint to the supervisory board of a stock corporation one member from among their ranks for every two members appointed by the general meeting (but not external members from the trade union). (Statutory one-third parity rule)

If the number of shareholder representatives is an odd number, then one more member is appointed as an employee representative. The one-third parity representation rule also applies to all committees of the supervisory board, except for meetings and votes relating to the relationship between the company and the management board members with the exception of resolutions on the appointment or revocation of an appointment of a member of the management board and on the granting of options on stocks of the company.

Employees' representatives shall exercise their functions on an honorary basis and their appointment may be terminated at any time only by the works council (central works council).

The rights and obligations of employees' representatives shall be the same as those of shareholders' representatives; this shall apply, in particular, to the right to receive information and to monitoring rights, to the obligation to act with due diligence and to maintain secrecy and to their liability for failure to comply. In the event of personal conflicts of interest, employees' representatives shall abstain from voting, the same being applicable to shareholders' representatives.

A member of the supervisory board shall be deemed as independent if said member does not have any business or personal relations with the company or its management board that constitute a material conflict of interests and is therefore suited to influence the behaviour of the member. This shall also apply to relationships with companies in which a member of the supervisory board has a considerable economic interest, but not for exercising functions in the bodies of the group. The approval of individual transactions by the supervisory board pursuant to L-Rule 48 does not automatically mean the person is qualified as not independent.
- The supervisory board member shall not have acted as auditor of the company or have owned a share in the auditing company or have worked there as an employee in the past three years.
- The supervisory board member shall not be a member of the management board of another company in which a member of the management board of the company is a supervisory board member.

- The supervisory board member shall not be a closely related (direct offspring, spouses, life partners, parents, uncles, aunts, sisters, nieces, nephews) of a member of the management board or of persons having one of the aforementioned relations.

These explanations should describe the specific characteristics and situation of the company such as size, company structure and ownership or any other relevant features.

The reasons for departures from the rules should be presented in the Corporate Governance Report in in such a way so that they are easy to find for shareholders, investors and other stakeholders.

Annex 3

In the interest of the greatest degree of transparency, all foreign companies listed on the Vienna Stock Exchange are called on to publish on their website the provisions of the company law that applies to them, at least with respect to the rules mentioned below, and to publish this information on their websites and keep it up to date.

No subscription to own shares

The company shall not be permitted to subscribe to own shares.

A subsidiary, as a founder or subscriber to shares or when exercising subscription rights, shall not be permitted to acquire shares of the company. The effectiveness of such an acquisition shall not be affected by a breach of this rule.

Any person with the function of founder or subscriber or exercising subscription rights having acquired shares for the account of the company or of a subsidiary shall not be able to claim that he or she has not acquired shares for their own account. Such person shall be liable for the full amount paid in irrespective of any agreement with the company or with a subsidiary. Such person shall not be entitled to any rights granted by the share before the acquisition of the shares for his or her own account.

No repayment of paid-in amounts

No repayment of amounts paid in by shareholders shall be permitted; for as long as the company exists, shareholders shall only have the right to claim a share in the net profit reported in the financial statements unless distributions are ruled out by law or by the company's articles of association. The payment of the acquisition price in the case of permissible acquisitions of own shares shall not be considered repayment of paid-in amounts.

Profit distribution to shareholders

The share in the profit claimed by shareholders is defined by the percentages they hold in the share capital of the company.

If the paid-in amounts on the share capital have not been paid in on all shares in equal proportions, then the shareholders shall receive an amount in advance of the distributable profit of four percent of the amount paid in; if the profit is not sufficient, the amount to be paid out shall be fixed according to a lower rate. Paid-in amounts that have been effected in the course of a business year are taken into account proportionally according to the time expired since the payment.

The articles of association may define another type of profit distribution.

Changes to the articles of association

Any change to the articles of association shall require a resolution by the general shareholders' meeting. The right to make changes, which refer only to the version, may be delegated by the general shareholders' meeting to the supervisory board.

The resolution may only be reached if the intended change to the articles of association has been explicitly notified with respect to its material content and announced in a timely manner.

The legal validity of any definitions regarding special privileges, foundation expenses, contributions in kind and acquisitions in kind may be changed only after a period of one year has expired.

The resolution by the general shareholders' meeting shall require a majority of at least three-quarters of the share capital represented at the time the resolution is reached. The articles of association may replace this majority by another majority of the share capital represented, but the object of business of the company can only be changed by majority that represents a higher share in the capital. The articles of association may also define other conditions.

If the effective distribution proportion applicable to several classes of shares is to be changed to the disadvantage of one class of shares, the resolution of the general shareholders' meeting shall require the approval of the disadvantaged shareholders by a separate vote of said shareholders for the resolution to become effective; the provisions of sentence 1 and 2 of the preceding paragraph shall apply to these shareholders. The disadvantaged shareholders may only reach such resolution if the separate vote has been explicitly notified and announced in a timely manner.

Exclusion of subscription rights

In the case of a capital increase, every shareholder must be allotted upon his or her request a percentage of the new shares that corresponds to the share held in the share capital of the company up to that time.

The right to subscribe to new shares may be excluded in full or in part only in the resolution on the increase of the share capital. In such case, the resolution shall, in addition to the requirements of the law or articles of association regarding capital increases, require a majority of the votes that corresponds to at least three-quarters of the share capital represented at the time of passage of the resolution. The articles of association may replace this majority by a larger majority in the share capital and also define other requirements.

Acquisition of own shares

The issuer shall disclose the applicable national laws regarding the acquisition of own shares. The following information shall be provided:

- For which purposes the acquisition of own shares is permitted
- The maximum amount of the permissible share in the share capital of the company when acquiring own shares according to national law
- Provisions regarding the duration of a stock buyback programme

- The required resolutions including those of the competent bodies pursuant to national law and the percentage majority needed for the required resolutions
- The mandatory disclosures relating to the acquisition of own shares

The same shall apply accordingly to the selling of own shares.

Annex 4

Brief Overview of the Austrian Corporation Act

The following section contains a brief overview of the main provisions of the Austrian Stock Corporation Act that relate to the main issues of corporate governance. The section has been written with the intent to make the Code easier to understand. This overview is not suitable for answering questions relating to legal issues. Since October 2004, the Regulation on European Joint Stock Companies has been in force. Ever since, it has been possible – with certain restrictions – to also establish the one-tier system (administrative council) by amending the corresponding articles of incorporation. However, as the Code does not address this specialty, this option is not discussed here further. Basically, in exchange-listed Societas Europaea (SE), the rules applicable to the management board members apply to the managing directors, and the rules applicable to the supervisory board apply to the administrative council.

The Austrian Stock Corporation Amendment Act 2009, the Austrian Company Law Amendment Act 2011 and the Austrian Stock Corporation Amendment Act 2019 have widened the differences between exchange-listed and „private“ (unlisted) stock corporations. This concerns, above all, the convening of general shareholders' meetings and participation in such meetings as well as the obligation to hold bearer shares of exchange-listed companies admitted to listing only in custody accounts from now on. Bearer shares are now also permitted for companies whose shares are traded on multilateral trading systems with the company's knowledge. Bearer shares that are held in the form of a document directly by the shareholder must be entered into a securities custody account at the latest by the end of 2013.

These regulations implemented the requirements of the Financial Action Task Force to prohibit anonymous securities transactions due to the risk of money laundering. Registered shares are still permitted in the case of exchange-listed companies, but the information in the shareholders register must be extended (especially trustee relationships).

As of this time, the fact of an exchange listing as well as the website of the company must be entered into companies register. The main regulations applicable to exchange-listed companies are explained below. The Stock Exchange Act 2018 that entered into force at the beginning of 2018 combines the Official Market and the Second Regulated Market into one regulated market segment. The requirements of the Market Abuse Regulation (EU) No. 596/2014 must be observed also by the companies whose stocks are traded on a multilateral trading system.

The Organisation of a Joint-Stock Company under Austrian Law

The organisational structure of Austrian stock corporations rests on three governing bodies: the general shareholders' meeting, the supervisory board and the management board. This organisational structure is designed to ensure the separation of powers. The general shareholders' meeting elects a supervisory board for a maximum period of five years, but may prematurely terminate this appointment by a qualified majority (the articles of incorporation may reduce this requirement to a simple majority). Upon a petition of a minority of 10%, a court can prematurely remove members elected by the general meeting and members delegated by shareholders from office for material reasons. The supervisory board elects a chairperson for a maximum period of five years; it is possible for the supervisory board to call for the resignation of the chairperson prematurely for material reasons (violation of duties, vote of no confidence by the general shareholders' meeting).

The management board manages the company at its sole responsibility and shall not be subject to instructions from the general shareholders' meeting or of the supervisory board. Certain transactions specified by law shall be subject to the prior approval of the supervisory board; monetary limits may be defined in the articles of incorporation or in the internal rules of business. The management board may present of its own accord, or (in the case of transactions subject to approval), the supervisory board may present to the general shareholders' meeting, motions for approval; this is a step usually taken in cases of fundamental restructuring of the enterprise (e.g. disposal of major divisions of the company). According to legal doctrine in the case of so-called structural decisions such as the sale or outsourcing of major parts of a company, there is an "unwritten law" assigning responsibility to the general shareholders' meeting. The Austrian Stock Corporation Amendment Act 2019 (Aktienrechts-Änderungsgesetz 2019, AktRÄG) stipulates that material transactions with related parties with a value of more than 10% of the total assets must be disclosed.

Shareholders and the General Shareholders' Meeting

Shareholders are to be treated equally unless there are factual reasons justifying a differentiation, as apply, for example, in certain relationships between group companies. The rights of shareholders are exercised at the general shareholders' meeting. At least once a year, an annual general meeting shall be held (at the latest eight months after the end of the preceding business year). The Stock Exchange Act requires the disclosure of the annual financial report by the latest four months after the close of the financial year. The ordinary general shareholders' meetings of most companies take place in the fourth to sixth month after the close of the financial year.

An extraordinary general meeting may be convened at any time by the management board, the supervisory board or a minority shareholder owning 5% of the shares.

The convening of the annual general shareholders' meeting must be published at the latest on the 28th day before the date of the ordinary general shareholders' meeting, and in the case of an extraordinary general meeting, by the latest on the 21st day before the date. The announcement convening the meeting must be published in the Austrian daily newspaper, Wiener Zeitung, and also disseminated via an appropriate medium (e.g. Reuters, Bloomberg). The FMA may define the appropriate information systems by issuing a Decree. Furthermore, information on the general shareholders' meeting must be published on the website of the company recorded in the Companies Register. By the latest on the 21st day before the general shareholders' meeting, the proposals for resolutions of the management board and/or supervisory board must be posted at the company for inspection. A minority of 5% has the right to add items to the agenda of a general shareholders' meeting already convened. The request must be sent to the company at the latest on the 21st day before the date of the meeting in the case of the ordinary general shareholders' meeting, and on the 19th day before the date of the meeting in the case of any extraordinary general shareholders' meeting. Moreover, the proposals for resolutions and the essential information and materials for the general shareholders' meeting must be accessible to shareholders on the website of the company on the 21st day before the date of the general shareholders' meeting. The right to participate in the general shareholders' meeting is founded in the case of bearer shares on the bearer being a shareholder at the close of the 10th day prior to the general shareholders' meeting (cutoff date for furnishing proof) that must be proven by a confirmation of the custodian bank. The registration for participation and the confirmation of the custodian bank must be sent to the company at the latest on the third workday before the general meeting.

The confirmation of the custodian bank can be a document in text format. The document that must be issued shall contain the minimum information stipulated in the Austrian Stock Corporation Act, with the confirmation document in English also being acceptable as sufficient proof.

SWIFT is used for sending the confirmation of the custodian bank. The by-laws may permit the sending of the scanned document by e-mail. Every shareholder also has the right to be represented by written proxy. If not specified in the by-laws of the company, it shall suffice to send the proxy by telefax or by e-mail. In the case of a proxy assigned to the custodian bank, a confirmation of the bank that it has been assigned the proxy shall suffice. Anonymous participation via a shareholder furnishing proof of identity ("third party owner") is not permitted.

The implementation of the Shareholders' Rights Directive has significantly widened the participation options for shareholders. Instead of the 'classical' general shareholders' meetings with physical attendance, the by-laws may permit a general shareholders' meeting to take place simultaneously at different locations within the country or abroad (satellite general meetings) or it may permit shareholders to take part via an acoustic, if applicable, also optical two-way communication line, and to also vote electronically. Apart from electronic voting, the by-laws may also permit voting by mail. If the by-laws do not specify the format of remote participation, but simply leaves this option open, then the management board with the consent of the supervisory board shall decide on the type of participation. The invitation to the general shareholders' meeting shall contain detailed information on the different forms of participation. Virtual annual general meetings are permitted according to the rules and requirements of the Virtual General Meetings Act (Virtuelle Gesellschafterversammlungen-Gesetz).

A minority of 1% shall have the right to have its proposals for resolutions made accessible on the website of the company. This does not rule out the possibility of putting forth counter-proposals to the scheduled items of the agenda at the general shareholders' meeting. Only in the case of elections to the supervisory board it is required that the proposed candidates be displayed on the website of the company at the latest on the fifth day before the general meeting.

Shareholders have the right to ask questions and submit motions for approval at general shareholders' meetings regarding all items on the agenda. Motions may only be made if these relate to an item on the agenda. Regarding the agenda item to discharge the management board and supervisory board members from liability, the vote may be requested through a special audit. The unjustified refusal to give answers or an inadequate answer may result in a resolution being contestable.

Basically, the general meeting shall decide by a simple majority of the votes cast. The law prohibits shares with more than one voting right. The possibility exists of issuing so-called non-voting preferred shares for which the voting rights are suspended as long as preferred dividends are paid out in full (including any subsequent payments). In cases in which the subscription rights of holders of preferred shares are to be altered, a special vote must be held among the holders of preferred shares. Furthermore, the articles of incorporation may also limit the maximum voting rights that a single shareholder may have regardless of the percentage of shares held in the company. In recent years, a clear tendency has emerged toward the principle of 'one share – one vote'. At ordinary general shareholders' meetings, the management board reports on the situation of the enterprise and submits the motion to distribute the profits as approved by the supervisory board. The shareholders are bound by the net profit reported on the balance sheet when deciding the profit distribution, thus the management board and the supervisory board ultimately have the final say in the dividend policy.

The by-laws may only define that the general shareholders' meeting carry forward part of the net profit to new account. Furthermore, the approval of the reports and activities of the management board and of the supervisory board are items on the agenda of annual general meetings, though such approval constituting only an expression of trust and does not release the board members from potential liability. The general meeting elects the members of the supervisory board and the auditor of the financial statements. Only persons may be elected to the supervisory board for which the proposal for election, and the related information and declarations have been made accessible on the website of the company at the latest on the fifth workday before the general meeting. The general meeting passes resolutions on changes to the articles of incorporation (generally by a two-third majority) and company transformation measures (e.g. mergers, split-ups, also generally by a two-third majority).

Supervisory board

The number of members on the supervisory board is defined in the articles of incorporation; the supervisory board must consist of at least three members (exclusive of employees' representatives); the articles of incorporation can define a maximum number as well as a framework. Moreover, employees' representatives (group employees' representatives) are entitled to (but not obligated) to delegate one employees' representative for every two shareholders' representative to the supervisory board. Apart from this, the law prohibits members of the management board or employees to hold positions on the supervisory board as shareholders' representatives (except in connection with the co-determination rights of employees' representatives). Members of the management board may switch to the supervisory board only after a cooling-off period of two years, unless the appointment is supported by 25% of shareholders. Effective from 2018, the Act on Equal Treatment of Women and Men defines that the supervisory board must consist of at least 30% women, unless the supervisory board has fewer than six shareholder representatives or the share of women in the company's staff is less than 20%. The share of 30% refers to the entire supervisory board (including employee representatives) unless the panel of capital representatives or of employee representatives raises an objection, thus requiring the shares to be defined separately for the two groups. If this rule is breached, the appointment becomes null and void.

If the by-laws do not prescribe a proportional vote, a vote shall be carried out for every single member of the supervisory board. If at least three members must be elected, a minority of 1% may request the election of opponents. If an opponent receives at least one-third of all votes at each voting round (except for the last one), then this candidate is elected in last place. To ensure transparency as regards suitability and independence of the supervisory board members, the following must be presented before the election: expert knowledge of the candidate; professional experience, and any circumstances that might constitute grounds for fearing a conflict of interest.

Decisions of the supervisory board are reached by a simple majority and the employees' representatives do not have a special status. A major role is played by the chairperson of the supervisory board who is responsible for the organisation of the supervisory board, its meetings and collaboration with the management board. Furthermore, the chairperson generally leads the general meeting.

The supervisory board must meet on a regular basis (at least four times a year). The annual projections and quarterly reports as well as special reports in cases of impending crises must be presented to the supervisory board.

The supervisory board may at any time conduct exhaustive audits itself or commission experts to conduct such audits. The supervisory board decides the approval of the annual financial statements and thus indirectly decides the amount of the dividend to be distributed. The supervisory board must audit the consolidated financial statements and approve them. The supervisory board may request experts to take part in its meetings.

Approval of the supervisory board must be obtained for contracts of the company or of its subsidiaries with members of the supervisory board for activities on behalf of the company or group outside of the supervisory board responsibilities and in which they have a considerable economic interest.

This shall also apply to contracts with companies in which a member of the supervisory board has a considerable economic interest.

Exchange-listed stock companies must set up an audit committee of the supervisory board of which one member must be a financial expert. The committee shall be charged with the tasks of auditing and preparing the resolutions to be passed by the entire supervisory board and of preparing a proposal for the appointment of an auditor for the financial statements. The auditor must send a separate report to the audit committee on its activities and the material findings of its audit. The chairperson of the audit committee and the financial expert must be independent and are not permitted to have served as a member of the management board or as top management staff or auditor of the company or have signed an auditor's opinion in the past three years. The audit committee must hold at least two meetings per financial year. The auditor must be invited to the meetings that deal with the preparation of the approval of the financial statements and their audit. The audit committee tasks include the monitoring of the accounting procedures, the monitoring of the effectiveness of the internal control system, and if applicable, the internal audit and risk management system as well as the process of the auditing of the annual accounts and consolidated financial statements. The audit committee must monitor the independence of the auditor; auditors must obtain approval from the audit committee for providing non-financial services insofar as these are permissible.

The audit committee conducts the procedure to select the auditor of the financial statements. When there is a change to the auditor, the committee must ensure that the general shareholders' meeting has a choice between two auditors. The tasks of the committee consist of taking care that the corresponding processes are set up properly at the company and its subsidiaries from the standpoint of the group. Furthermore, the audit of the Corporate Governance Report is one of the tasks of this committee.

Management Board

The supervisory board takes decisions autonomously on the election and thus the selection of the management board members, and on the establishment of the position of chairperson of the management board. If a chairperson is appointed to the management board, the chairperson shall have the casting vote unless a different procedure has been defined in the articles of incorporation for decisions of the management board in the event of a tie. Unlike German law, Austrian law does not prescribe the appointment of an employees' representative to the management board. The management board is a collective body, meaning that responsibility for governing the business of the company is borne equally by all members of the management board. A differentiated assignment of responsibility is possible and common practice (usually defined by the supervisory board), which is done by assigning areas of responsibility to the board members in the internal rules of business. If the areas of responsibility are divided among the members of the management board, each board member shall bear primary responsibility for his or her assigned area, although the other members shall still be under the obligation to constantly monitor and address any deficiencies they perceive in the other areas of responsibility. In the case of measures having a material impact as, for example, business transactions that must be presented to the supervisory board for approval, the collective responsibility of the management board shall be mandatory and indivisible.

Remuneration Policy, Remuneration

The implementation of the Second Shareholders' Rights Directive stipulates that the supervisory board must adopt a remuneration policy for both the management board and the supervisory board, and must also present the remuneration policy to the annual general meeting for a resolution. The nature of such resolution adopted by the annual general meeting is that of a recommendation. The remuneration policy must be presented for a resolution to the annual general meeting every four years unless there is an amendment. The remuneration paid to governing bodies must be defined in the remuneration policy. The remuneration policy must be published on the company's website and must be made available on the website for as long as it is valid.

The implementation of the Directive must also include a joint resolution of the management board and supervisory board on a remuneration report. The remuneration report must include remuneration paid and owed in the financial year. This must be done for every year. The remuneration report must be presented to the annual general meeting for a resolution; the nature of this resolution is also that of a recommendation. The report must be made available on the website of the company for a period of ten years. The section for the corporate governance report required up to now is no longer mandatory.

Non-financial Report

Large exchange-listed companies that employ over 500 persons on the annual average must include a non-financial statement in the consolidated or single-entity management report. The information must cover the topics of environmental protection, social responsibility and treatment of employees, respect for human rights, and anti-corruption and control. A separate non-financial report may be published instead of including it in the management report. This report must be published the same as the management report. The non-financial report must be reviewed by the supervisory board.

Capital Increases and Subscription Rights

In cases of capital increases and the issuance of rights to new shares (bonds with attached warrants, convertible bonds, profit participating bonds), existing shareholders shall have subscription rights, which the general meeting may only exclude by a three-fourth majority vote if this move is justified by the facts of the case (e.g. in the case of contributions in kind). This resolution shall be announced separately and shall require a written statement by the management board explaining the reasons and shall also be presented to the commercial register of companies. The management board may be authorised to increase the share capital of the company within a defined scope with the approval of the supervisory board without requiring the prior approval of the general shareholders' meeting (authorised capital). This also applies to the issuance of convertible bonds. This authorisation shall be limited to a period of five years, but may be prolonged repeatedly by the general shareholders' meeting. Here as well, special reporting obligations apply if subscription rights are to be excluded. It may be assumed that relevant reasons exist for excluding subscription rights in the case of new issues for stock option schemes for employees, management-level staff or members of the boards of the company. It shall also be possible to authorise the issue of options on new issues exclusively to this group of persons with the prior authorisation of the general meeting. In this case, the management board shall be subject to extensive reporting obligations.

Share Buybacks

The acquisition of own shares is subject to substantial restrictions. The law permits the general shareholders' meeting of a listed company to authorise the management board for a period of 30 months to repurchase the company's own shares up to a maximum of 10%. If this repurchase option is exercised, extensive disclosure requirements apply according to the provisions of the Stock Exchange Act.

The Capital Market

Austrian capital market law has implemented the EU legislation regarding the prohibition of insider dealings, the prevention of market manipulation and ad hoc reporting obligations and the reporting of transactions in the stocks of the company by managing employees or persons or institutions closely related to them. The provisions of the Market Abuse Regulation apply directly. This also includes the preparation and publication of the corporate governance report. Furthermore, public offerings of shares and derivatives are subject to the prospectus rules of the EU Prospectus Directive 2017/1129. The approval of the prospectus is the competence of the Financial Market Authority (FMA). The Stock Exchange Act 2018 now specifies a procedure for delisting shares, profit-linked bonds and convertible bonds listed on the regulated market of the Vienna Stock Exchange. This procedure requires the support of 75% of shareholders, as well as a takeover bid, which must include, in addition to the minimum price requirements applicable to a mandatory bid, a lower limit derived from the weighted average price of the last five trading days before the intended delisting was announced. The Takeover Commission is responsible for monitoring price determination. For companies with their registered office in the EU/EEA listed on the Vienna Stock Exchange, a mandatory takeover bid is required as part of the implementation of the Takeover Directive when a change in the control of the company occurs. The requirement of a mandatory bid is assumed to apply in the case of the direct or indirect (active) acquisition of a share of more than 30% (alone or jointly with another legal person). In the case of investments of more than 26% that do not yet trigger a mandatory bid, it is required to report this to the Takeover Commission and the voting shares exceeding the secured blocking minority of 26% are suspended. The mandatory bid that must be made in the case of a change in the controlling interest in a company must be in cash and must correspond as a minimum to the weighted average stock market price of the share during the last six months or to the highest price of the last 12 months paid by the party gaining the controlling interest, if the price is higher than the aforementioned average. In the event of a takeover bid, the management board and the supervisory board are under the strict obligation to act impartially. The takeover procedure is accompanied and monitored by the Takeover Commission, which is an independent public authority. A mandatory bid is also required if a shareholder owning a percentage of between 30% and 50% buys 2% or more of the shares of a company within one year (creeping in). Further information is available on the website of the Takeover Commission, www.takeover.at. Sections of the Takeover Act also apply to voluntary takeover bids even if there is no change in controlling interest. If a bidder reaches 90%, the bidder has the right to exclude the remaining shareholders at the offer price and takes over their shares.

Groups and Company Transformations

Although Austrian company law does know the concept of the group company, but unlike German law it does not contain a separate legal framework applicable to groups. The formation of a group does not automatically lead to the liability of the parent company for the entire group. Likewise, when forming a group company, there is no automatic obligation to make a tender offer to outside shareholders unless the provisions of the Takeover Act apply. The mere presence of a majority of, for example, a “core shareholder” holding 25% does not yet trigger the obligation to make a tender offer according to the Takeover Act. In the case of combinations or split-ups of enterprises, special rights are granted to shareholders, in particular, every shareholder has the right to initiate an examination by a court of law of the appropriateness of the conversion ratio or cash settlement. In the case of split-ups that change the proportions of shareholdings, every shareholder that did not consent has the right to exit. Upon request of the exiting shareholder, the tender offer is to be examined in a special court procedure. If the decision is reached to improve the offer, all shareholders benefit. The 2006 Act on the Squeeze-out of Shareholders makes it possible for a shareholder owning 90% of the stock to squeeze out the remaining minority shareholders by offering them an adequate cash tender offer. In this case as well, the cash tender offer is subject to an examination by the courts, with all shareholders having the right to initiate an examination procedure (irrespective of any objection at the general meeting). Other former squeeze-out mechanisms are no longer permitted.
